This is a new level of moral relativity. Apparently, authorities detaining people for 14 days under the false pretense of public safety is okay. The forcible confinement is not the issue. Nor is the nasal rape that comes in the form of PCR tests. However, the entire experience is suddenly a human rights violation if a sexual assault is committed during that time.

1. Rempel Supports House Arrest In Principle

This is from February 6, 2021. At the 28 second mark, Michelle Rempel-Garner explicitly states that everyone (presuming her party included), supports the idea of forcing people into their homes for 14 days at a time.

In her usual “Canada last” ways, she does ask for exemptions for Temporary Foreign Workers from quarantine, at a time when unemployment in Canada is still extremely high.

To reiterate, the “Official Opposition” doesn’t have a problem with imprisoning people. Their complaints are limited to some of the details of implementing such policies.

2. Fake Outrage Over Assault In Quarantine

The federal government has a duty to protect everyone in their quarantine facilities and those who are trying to follow federal regulations while at home.

The responsibility for the conduct of those overseeing the facilities and enforcing the rules lies with the current federal government. It is unthinkable that the government is mandating women into vulnerable isolation scenarios that leave them at-risk and unsafe.

The very least that Canadians can expect is to be secure and protected, particularly in the presence of federal representatives, and while in federal facilities. These violations are unconscionable.

Given the failure to ensure that Canadians under federally mandated quarantines are protected, the Liberal government must put a pause on these new measures, while continuing with the pre-existing on-arrival testing and the 14-day at-home quarantine for all international travellers. During this time, the Liberal government must review the way in which their previous system failed to protect Canadians against sexual assault, and institute an effective system to ensure that the security agents tasked with compliance oversight are effectively vetted and subject to oversight.

Given all of these points, we, the undersigned members of the Standing Committee on Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness request that, pursuant to Standing Order 106(4), you convene a meeting of the Committee so that the Committee may consider the following motion:

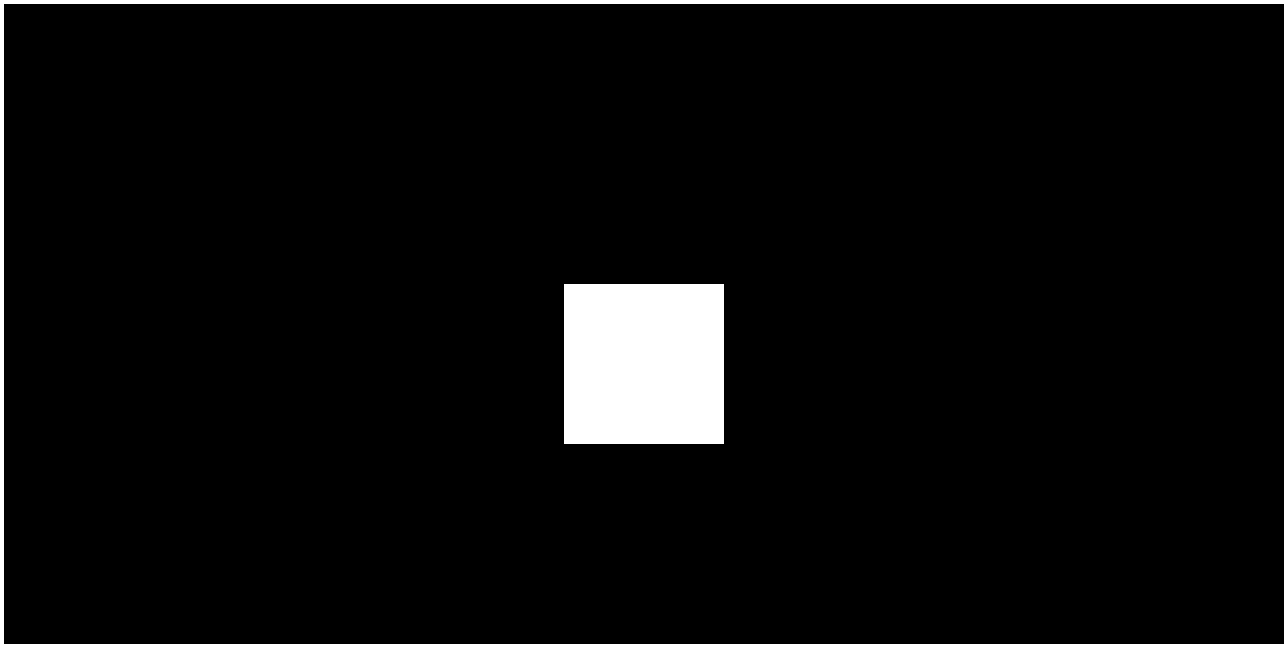
Does any of this mean that Conservatives now have a problem with this sort of confinement? Keep in mind, it would be illegal in any other circumstances. No. Instead, all that is asked is for a review, and to do a better job of vetting the guards holding them prisoner.

> "The Liberal government must take action now. We call for the Liberals to suspend the hotel quarantine requirement until they have put measures in place to ensure the safety of Canadians and institute a system for verifying at-home quarantine that doesn't involve security agents who have not been properly vetted. During this necessary pause, the federal government should continue with on-arrival testing and the 14-day at-home quarantine for all international travelers to protect the public health of Canadians."

Even in her statement, there is no principled objection to the quarantine camps themselves (or internment camps). There is no objection to forcing people into house arrest. In fact, they seem content to re-establish these detention centers once better screening methods are in place.

The National Post mentioned that there was a call to suspend the program, which is not the same thing as cancelling it altogether.

3. Vaccine Agenda: They're All In It Together



00:00 02:20

(See 1:30 mark in this, or original video). Trudeau claims that "normalcy will not return without a vaccine that is widely available, and that could be a very long way off".

This is Erin O'Toole, the leader of the so-called "Conservative" Party of Canada, which claims to be the main opposition to Trudeau. Problem is: they don't actually oppose anything ideologically. They whine about vaccines and tests not arriving fast enough, but don't object on moral or ethical grounds.

There's no way to describe this other than as a dog and pony show. These "leaders" are just going through the motions.

Dangerous times ahead folks. Enough is enough with this scamdemic.
THEY are all in this together and it’s not for our benefit.
